“The number of their killed and wounded could never be exactly ascertained, as many of them fell among the snow, which covering them during the winter, their bodies were found scattered about, upon the melting of it as the summer approached.”<sup>1</sup>

“It seems to be a universal practice among belligerents of all nations to lessen the number of the slain of the side of the party which reports the event, and to increase it on the part of the enemy.”<sup>2</sup>

“When the dead, on the following days, were transported on the carioles, passed our habitation for deposition in the ‘Dead house’ we observed many bodies...and again, when our wounded were returned to us from the hospital, they uniformly spoke of being surrounded there in its many chambers by many of the wounded of the enemy.”<sup>3</sup>
