AEHS Annual Meeting Held

On Oct. 2 in Augusta, the annual meeting of our Society was held. Yearly election of directors and officers were held. Elected to president, was John Robbins of Richmond, ME, John Parsons of Monroe, NY as vice president, Alan Burnell of Eustis, ME. as treasurer and Stephen Clark of Scarborough, ME as secretary. In addition, directors were elected. For a term of three years were Rusty Arsenault of Skowhegan, Stephen and Sherri Clark of Scarborough, ME, Guy Grant Jr. of Orono, ME. and Robert Donovan of Emden, ME. For a term of two years, elected were John Parsons and Laura Stewart of Manchester, NH. Thomas Desjardin presented a very interesting talk about the artifacts recovered this summer from the Hospital Site in the Carry Ponds area.

Outgoing president Steve Clark described several programs that are being proposed by the AEHS directors. One will be the exploration of acquiring land to establish a historic park in the Chain of Ponds area to preserve about four miles of the old Height of Land Portage Trail near the Canadian border. This possibility will be explored during the next year.

Another program will be to assist the State Bureau of Parks and Lands to install a series of new interpretive signs along the route of the 1775 Expedition. Money has been appropriated to manufacture and install these signs. The first will be on US 201 in Caratunk, to mark the point where the Expedition left the Kennebec and began the torturous portage over the Great Carrying Place. It is hoped it will be ready for dedication in 2012. More on this will appear in the spring edition of the Messenger.

Continuing restoration work at the Colburn House was described and it was pointed out that the major work on the Barn should be completed for the 2012 summer season.

It was reported that Dude Wing had generously obtained a fine telescoping flag pole for the Nichols Cabin and he installed it during the summer. Trail maintenance by Ron Gamage and Rusty Arsenault and others was described. All present trails in the Carry Ponds area are open for public use.

The high point of the meeting was a fine presentation by long time member, Bob Cunningham, on the subject of the 1975 reenactment. It took place along the route of the Expedition along the Kennebec, Dead and Chaudiere Rivers to Quebec City. He also supplied scrap books with newspaper clippings of the three week event. It was very well received.

Recognition was made to both Sherri Clark, secretary and Bob Cunningham, treasurer, who were stepping down after three years of service to the Society. Both will continue as directors.

The Lost Hospital, Found

The site of the so-named "Arnold's Hospital," lost since 1775, has been located. It was built along the Great Carrying Place portage trail as a temporary structure to house sick soldiers. It was described by Henry Dearborn as being a "blockhouse." There was no record left of its specific construction, its size or its exact location.

As it was built hastily, it was probably a simple log wall structure, with no foundation, and a bark roof. Cracks were chinked with moss and would have had one or two openings. It was built to house only about 12-15 sick men, as specified by Col. Arnold. It was probably about 16 X 16 feet in size. Such a structure would have long ago rotted away, leaving no trace of its location.

Around the hospital, was located a large campsite with many campfires, and tents. Arnold used this campsite as his headquarters for several days. As the four divisions each in turn passed through this campsite; most likely it could accommodate up to 300 men at a time. With this number of men using the site, it could be expected that metal objects were lost or left behind to mark the location. Using descriptions in several of the soldier's journals, an approximate location was pinpointed. It would have been near the beginning of the portage trail between East and Middle Carry Ponds. It was in this area that the hunt began.

On August 20th of this year, 11 AEHS members met at the Nichols Cabin on Middle Carry Pond. From here, the group struck out for the designated site for the hunt. Duluth and Kenny Wing had once explored the site and felt it was a probable place to start. It was close to the pond's shore, and was level, making it a logical site to accommodate several hundred men. Eight metal detectors were used and it was not long before "hits" began to sound through the woods. The group fanned out and explored an area with a radius of about 100 yards. At the center of this search area a large number of metal artifacts were recovered, marking the campsite's location. The large number of artifacts definitely delineated the location of the campsite.

Recovered were a broad axe, an English half-penny, a beautiful pewter spoon, a pewter military button, with the number "3" on it, a jackknife, six musket balls, musket parts, and the most important find, parts of a cast iron camp kettle. It is this latter item which is the clincher. It was in 17 pieces and when some were assembled, it indicated a kettle that would be used by a large group, for communal cooking. It would have weighed more than twenty-five pounds. It is possible that this kettle was left at the hospital to prepare meals for the invalided soldiers.

So the number and concentration of the metal artifacts have identified the site as being where the hospital and larger campsite were located.

These artifacts after being treated and preserved, will be displayed most likely at the Colburn House in Pittston. The site near East Carry Pond has proven to be the most important location along the entire route of the Expedition, ever discovered. It now solves the mystery of where the hospital was located. All in all, it was a great day for the Society. Not quite as storied as the discovery of King Tut's Tomb, but almost!

Test your Knowledge of the Expedition!

1. How many companies comprised the Expedition?
 2. Who was the Expedition member who later led an American army defeating the British at Cowpens?
 3. What Expedition member later became known as the "Patriot of Worcester and has a statue there?"
 4. What two captains leading Expedition companies, were from Maine?
 5. There were four portages as the Expedition ascended the Kennebec River. Name them in order from first to last?
 6. A certain tributary along the main stem of the Kennebec River was known by the men of the Expedition as Six Mile Stream. What is it named today?

Bob Cunningham Steps Down

After many years acting as the Society's treasurer, Bob stepped down at the 2011 annual meeting. Bob will continue as a director, as he has for nearly 40 years. . Bob has been a successful business man who now resides in historic Lincoln Center, MA. He has been involved with the Lexington- Concord Minutemen reenactment that occur each year. Bob was one of the founding members of the Society and has helped guide the organization to its current successes. We wish Bob well, thank him for all he has done and his participation for many more years as a director of the Society.

Progress at th Colburn House

Visitors to the Colburn House will be pleased to observe the fine progress that is occurring on the huge barn. As most members know, the entire barn was badly rotted around the sills of the structure. Later, the entire structure was jacked up several feet in order to lay a new foundation, and to replace the entire sill on all four sides. After the jacking, it was also found that the main vertical barn frame was also rotted up to a height of 6-8 feet. So this needed replacement as well.

This past summer, available funds have allowed the replacement of about two-thirds of the huge sill timbers and vertical uprights. More will be done next summer, hopefully to complete the sills and uprights, so that the barn can be lowered onto the new foundation. Then the work can commence on replacing the lower sheathing and siding, and work can begin on an entirely new barn floor.

After these projects are completed, the effort will shift to the second floor, to revamp the bateaux display and to establish other displays. In the long run, it is hoped that various types of social events such as weddings, meetings, and neighborhood gatherings can be held here.

As reported previously, much has been accomplished in the main house, including many new displays and a rebuilding of the main chimney.

The caretaker's quarters in the ell have been completely redone and refurbished.

Some may ask why these major renovations have been drawn out so long, now going on to its fourth year. Easy answer! The State budget is extremely tight but through the diligence of Tom and Lori Desjardin among others, they have kept at it, a little at a time. We recognize their efforts and owe them many thanks for their exemplary work.

Also, several foundations have donated significant funds to the restoration project as well as some members of the AEHS. It is a given, that if private funds from generous benefactors became available, it would speed the process to completion. For more information, please contact the president of the AEHS, Jay Robbins.

2012 is Upon Us

Flipping new calenders are on the docket for replacement soon! Other than the end of the Mayan Calender and a minor presidential election, not much is scheduled. This applies to the AEHS as well, at least as far as planning new Society events. The directors would appreciate any suggestions as to what would interest our members. So if you have any ideas regarding what you as members might like, by all means, let us know! Please contact:
